The Plectrum.—The Plectrum with which the Mandolin is played, and as here with shown, is partially egg-shaped ; it is made out of either leather,* cherry-wood bark celluloid, tortoise shell, or analogous substances.

RUDIMENTS OF MUSIC.

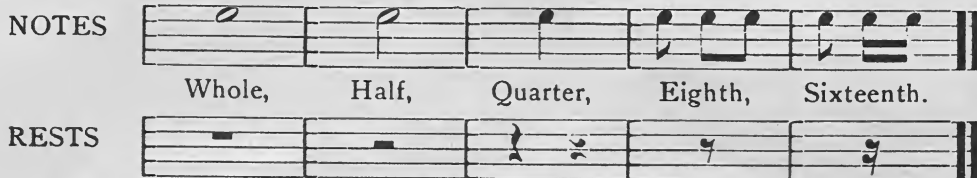

Music is written on or between five parallel lines called a staff. When the notes run higher or lower than the 1st or 5th lines added or leger lines are used, thus.

The staff is divided into measures by perpendicular lines that are called bars. A double bar marks the end of a strain. Dots at the bar indicate repeat.

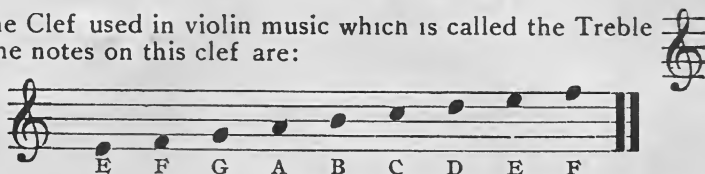

Musical sounds are represented by characters called notes. As the sounds are of different duration, the shape of the note is changed to correspond with the length of the sound which it represents. The following shows the different kinds of notes and rests.

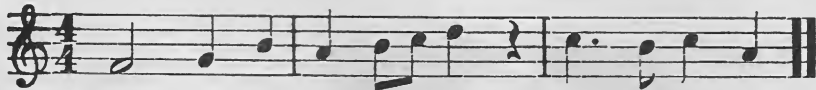

A dot placed after a note or rest adds one-half to its value.

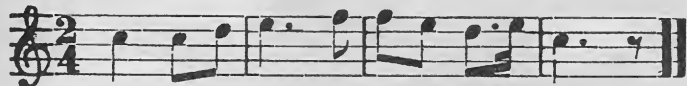

There is only one Clef used in violin music which is called the Treble. The names of the notes on this clef are:

All movements of music are expressed by figures following the clef, which indicate the time. Time is divided into two divisions, odd or even; the even measures are known as common time, and the odd as triple time. In common time, indicated by $\frac{4}{4}$ or the character C , each measure contains the exact value of a whole note, which may be composed of various notes and rests.

When figures $\frac{2}{4}$ indicate another kind of common time, wherein each measure contains the value of two quarter notes.

When the figures $\frac{3}{4}$ are placed after the clef they indicate that each measure is equal in length to the value of three quarter notes.

The figures $\frac{6}{8}$ indicate that each measure equals in value six eighth notes.

A sharp (#) raises a note one-half tone, a flat (b) lowers it one-half tone, and a natural (n) restores the note to its natural position.

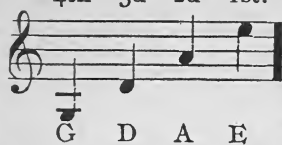

D. C. means return to the beginning and play to Fine . p means play softly; pp very softly; f loud; ff very loud.
